I am using PDO and this $dbh = new PDO('mysql:host=localhost;dbname=test','my_user','my_pass'); Now, when $dbh is connected, is there anyway of converting it to a stream? I want to pass $dbh to a function which expects a stream. A: From php manual: $dbh->prepare($sql); executes $sql as a prepared statement. The returned PDOStatement object can be used like any other PDO statement. Monday, 20 March 2017 This review was a part of the 'Women of Colour in Visual Arts' exhibition hosted by the Kalamthan. The exhibition was showcased in an aesthetically pleasing way, the artists selected were not only good in their artwork but their background, this made the exhibition more appealing and entertaining to the public. One of the reasons why i enjoyed the exhibition was the way the guests that attended the exhibition were greeted and informed that the exhibition will feature the work of artists of colour. The art pieces also displayed were interactive and i was able to observe the artwork and was able to relate to the artwork. The art exhibition also highlighted the work and the role women of colour in visual arts played in the development of our society. About Me I am a student who is currently studying History at St. Johns College, Surrey and strongly believe in the power of the arts to transform lives and change people. I recently returned from traveling through South America where I spent a few months learning a variety of Spanish. Its been a great experience for me being immersed in a new culture, meeting lots of new people and experiencing everything the different countries have to offer. The latter half of February saw the annual Londinium Festival of History, which drew thousands of visitors to London's East End. I will be writing a couple of posts on Londinium next month. In the meantime, you can follow my activities on Twitter @londonartsy 3da54e8ca3
