If I use model.get('id') I get an id property with type String; if I use model.id I get an id property with type Number. In the ember-data-models-docu there is also a comment get(...) This will return the object's id as a String if it exists, or undefined. which seems to suggest that I should use model.get('id'). The documentation for JSON API ember-data-models-docu explains that the id property of a record can be accessed with model.id, but it's not clear what the type of this property should be. A: Just found an answer in the ember-data-models-docu. The id property is a Number, but it's defined as an IDBKey. Q: How to design a fire and forget queue I'm looking to design a queue system for my app that retrieves a users queue, and then returns the next queued queue. Basically I'm going for a "fire and forget" design. I'm using a) Ruby b) Amqp Does anyone have any suggestions on the best way to do this? Thanks A: This is a fun one. You can create a simple c++ object, or using Ruby the Queue.enqueue method. This will schedule something to happen at some point in the future. If the user wants to cancel it, he can do so by just calling #cancel, and all queued operations will cancel as well. If you want something a little more complex, look at Then you can process queued jobs and then tell the queue to just go ahead. If you want to know which jobs to take out of the queue and process, you might look at 'use strict'; /** * @ng
