Q: Programmatically change of week days in C# using System.Globalization.Calendar The app I'm working on needs to programmatically create the calendar and change the weekdays in C#. I have the calendar created, but I am unable to change the days of the week. I followed the example at: "The.NET Framework Calendar class contains static methods to alter calendar properties, and create and parse dates. These methods are documented in the Calendar section of the Platform Invocation Guide (PIG)." This is my code: static void Main(string[] args) { // Set the locale to 1 for English (United Kingdom) System.Globalization.Calendar cal = new System.Globalization.Calendar(); cal.CalendarType = System.Globalization.CalendarType.Gregorian; cal.Calendar = System.Globalization.CultureInfo.GetCultureInfo("en-GB"); cal.CustomDayNames = true; cal.CustomMonthNames = true; // Create the calendar with the correct locale System.Globalization.Calendar calendar = System.Globalization.Calendar.
