The Lightroom Interface Lightroom has replaced Photoshop as the primary image editing tool for most photographers, largely because of its ease of use and intuitive image-editing capabilities.

Lightroom merges Photoshop's layer-based editing system with the tools Photoshop is best known for—selection and filters. It also offers the most functionality for organizing images and sharing them with others. You can control most of the features through Lightroom's Bridge window (Figure 2-2 shows a window with images in the preview pane on the left and the Develop module on the right.")). All photographs in your collection appear in the window and you can drag and drop images directly to the Develop module for further editing. For example, you can drag your images directly into a selection or clone stamp, which are common edits in this module. Figure 2-2 Once you have selected a group of images in Bridge, they will appear in the Develop module. Image courtesy of David Bruce Photography Inc. Lightroom automatically builds a collection of your images based on the rules you set in the Import Settings. In addition to the settings that appear in Figure 2-3, you can choose to create a catalog (collection) for your images with or without keywords, or select from different collection types to organize your photos into groups. The default is a date-based collection that automatically groups images created on the same day together. You can also group images by location, subject, or keywords. Lightroom includes several custom built-in filters, such as Hue/Saturation, Curves, Vibrance, and Smart Tones. You can also apply any Photoshop filter to your photos. Lightroom includes the following presets:

- Vibrance is a customized version of the standard Vibrance filter found in Photoshop
- Contrast is similar to the standard curves in the Curves dialog box in Photoshop
- Shadow/Highlight is a customized version of the standard Shadow/Highlight filter
- Effects offers several custom filters found in Photoshop that include Displacement, Emboss, Bokeh, Invert, Knife, Oil Paint, and More
- Overall Luminance allows you to adjust the overall brightness of your images

Here is what I want to do: Basically, I want to set up an array with an ID, a colour and a price. I want to be able to loop through it and if the price matches that of an object I have saved in an array of objects in the DB, I want to delete the object in the DB and delete the item in the array. However, I am not sure how to set it up in a loop, if that makes any sense? function display() { $.ajax({ type: "POST", url: "ajax/delete.php", data: "", success: function (result) { $.each(result, function (

Q: Displaying different types of ticks in a graph I would like to know if it's possible to set the ticks of a bar chart or a matplotlib.pyplot graph to display certain values but not others, and not to break the graph into parts of the ticks (I know you can use different tick types). Here is a graph of a bar chart I would like to have with ticks displaying 2 and 4, but not 4 and 6: In this case, I would like to display ticks 2 and 4 but not ticks 4 and 6. I have tried using ticks="", but it does not work. A: As first approach I recommend using pyplot.bar with xticks/yticks parameter import matplotlib.pyplot as plt import numpy as np data = np.random.randint(0,10, size=(10, 2)) fig,ax = plt.subplots() plt.bar(data[:,0], data[:,1], align='center') plt.xticks(data[:,0],data[:,1],rotation=45) plt.yticks(data[:,0],data[:,1]) ax.set_ylim(0,5) ax.set_xticks(data[:,0]) ax.set_yticks(data[:,1]) plt.show() A: In matplotlib you can just use ax.set_xticks([2,4]) See this post to see more.
